21) Famous bluesman Big George Brock worked on the Flowers Plantation in his youth and describes it in some detail.

Hidden History of Mississippi Blues

Although many bluesmen began leaving the Magnolia State in the early twentieth century to pursue fortune and fame up north, many others stayed home. These musicians remained rooted to the traditions

<https://books.google.com/books?id=TtOJCgAAQBAJ&pg=PT26&lpg=PT26&dq=flowers+plantatio>

In the 2006 documentary film Hard Times, Mississippi-born bluesman Big George Brock recalled working the cotton fields as a young man and tied that experience to the blues:

The blues come from hard times. Blues came from a feeling that you got when you didn't have nowhere else to go, and the blues walked into your soul and into your mind, and it just accumulate like grass grow out of the ground. It just grew up in you. That's the way it grew up in me. I learned how to sing the blues out in the cotton field. Out in them lonesome cotton fields and stuff, I learned how to sing the blues.

Out there, you just think about what you have, and you make your own self happy. I had a mule that if you didn't sing the blues, she didn't want to work right. And if you sing the blues, that mule, she'd work all day. You walking the cotton field, you walking the fields all day long. You just don't know how many miles you go in the run of a day. Them's a long mile.

They used to plant cotton with a mule. Now, they plant it with a tractor. Plant it, work it, grow it, pick it. They do everything now with tractors. But back in them days, they did it with these. You did it with your hands. We used to pick a bale of cotton a day, right here [on Flower's Plantation, just outside Clarksdale]. You had two rows, and this is the way you did this cotton. [Brock shows how to pick two rows, side to side, as he walks through the field.] You grab this cotton like this, pick it, one row to the other, and put it in your sack. You go all the way up there, till you get all the way, and your sack get full. When your sack get full, then you have to go over there to the trailer and weigh that cotton, [put it in the trailer] and then come back and start right back where you left off at. Then, all day long, you pick cotton. And then when you get the amount of cotton that you want [i.e., the trailer is full], the amount of work you want, you took it to the gin—'cause the trailer would be sitting out there on the road.

22) I'm pressed for time, so I'll leave it at this for now. Greg is very racist and wants a civil war in America and those that he hates: Jews, African-Americans, homosexuals, immigrants, and others are his enemy.

Will his family denounce Greg? I doubt it, but hope so.

1) Patrick J. "Pack" LaPorte was exposed in this thread, but I'm about to show you the true depths of his hate. It's about to get really dark and, if you're in the Columbia, SC area, really scary.

2) I'm going to work my way up to the worst stuff and it's nightmarish. To begin, Patrick didn't just ride to the #UniteTheRight white supremacist rally in August 2017, he drove the "Hate Van"
